KAY JEWELRY IN COLUMBUS THEFT SCENE

Clerk Is Kidnapped By Three Bandits and Locked In Vault.

SPREAD DRAGNET

Store Is In Middle of City's Downtown District.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 8.—Theft of $40,000 in gems from the Kay Jewelry store here and the kidnapping of one of the store's clerks was discovered today when the wife of the kidnaped clerk frightened at her husband's absence and informed the store manager and police.

Sam Meisner, manager, went to the store where he found Ed Orlander, 26, handcuffed inside the company's vault in the rear of the store. He had been held captive in the huge vault for more than eight hours.

CAUGHT IN ALLEY
Orlander was the last employee to leave the store Wednesday evening. As he was walking up an alley in the rear of his home, three bandits held him up, forced him into their automobile, drove to the store and compelled him to unlock the rear door.

The three gunmen then commanded the clerk to open the vault where the most costly jewelry had been stored for the night. They filled several large bags with diamonds, watches, rings and other valuables.

They were unable to get all the gems into the bags, so one of the robbers went to the basement of the store brought up several large cardboard boxes and the remainder of the jewelry was placed in them.

DESCRIBE MEN

When the robbery was completed, the bandits handcuffed Orlander to a steel pole inside the vault and escaped.

Orlander furnished authorities with descriptions of his attackers and also gave them several clues as to their identity. Local police and county officials spread a dragnet about this district in an effort to apprehend the trio.

The jewelry store is located in the center of the downtown business district.

Tip From Capone Helps Cops In Search.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Bringing seven months of intensive investigation to a dramatic climax, State's Attorney John A. Swanson today led a nattily-dressed college-boy type of youth before an assemblage of newspapermen and named him as the man who shot and killed Alfred "Jake" Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter who turned racketeer.

"This is the man who killed 'Jake' Lingle," said Chief Investigator Pat Roche. "We will ask his indictment for Lingle's murder."

The prisoner's name was given as Leo Brothers, alias Louis Bader, reputed gunman and terrorist of St. Louis. Although he appeared to be but 24 years old his age is 32.

MAN IDENTIFIED

Brothers has been identified by several who witnessed Lingle's murder by a lone assassin in the Randolph-st pedestrian subway last June 9, Prosecutor Swanson said.

Investigation has disclosed that Lingle was put on the "spot" by a killer hired by gambling interests whom the reporter had either double-crossed or harassed through excessive protection levies. The $65-a-week police reporter had an annual income of at least $65,000 and had come to be known as Chicago's "unofficial police chief" through his asserted power to protect or persecute the various underground organizations.

CAPONE TIP HELPS

It was on a tip from one of Capone's trusted lieutenants that Brothers' name was given authorities as the killer of Lingle, according to underworld reports. Lingle was known to be an intimate friend of the gang overlord.

Brothers was seized in his south side apartment hideout Dec. 21 and kept incommunicado in a downtown hotel while detectives and members of the board of strategy named to solve the reporter's murder questioned him day and night.

MAY PROBE OHIO PEN'S HOLOCAUST

OBITUARY

Most beautiful and impressive were the services at the United Brethren Church, Tuesday afternoon for the late Mrs. Mary Denman, conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. F. Rutherford. A large gathering of relatives and friends, and many floral offerings gave a loving tribute to a life that had been such a help and inspiration to so many.

Rev. Rutherford most fittingly spoke of her long life, fifty-six years, spent in her Master's service, right there in that Church, thirty of them as church organist. He spoke of her as a loving wife and mother, and the many many friends she had won in her quiet sweet very interested in every detail of their lives.

He closed with that tender little poem of Kipling's "When Earth is last picture is painted."

A trio composed of Mrs. Ellen Hegele, Mrs. Fannie Greeno and Mrs. Bessie Long sang three o'd favorite hymns—"In The Cleft," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "Asleep in Jesus".

Among those attending from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Lucas of Piqua, Mrs. W. B. Toole of Jamaica, N. Y., Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Kuhen and children of Wellston, Mrs. J. W. Richardson of Dayton, Mrs. Jay Cain of Lima, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Denman, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Denman, Mr. and

Mrs. Andrew Denman, Lee Deupman, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Johnson and Mrs. Grace Ward all of Columbus

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our appreciation to the many friends and neighbors who extended words of sympathy and acts of kindness in our sore bereavement. Also do we thank those who sent beautiful floral offerings.

C. A. C. Defeats New Lexington In Thriller

Take Overtime Game, 24 To 18

The C. A. C. basketball team went down into the hills of Perryco, long enough Wednesday evening to play their best game of the year and to turn back the spring powers of the New Lexington Company F, crack court team, in a thrilling overtime contest. The score was 24-18. At the end of the regulation playing time the tally was deadlocked, 18-all, by virtue of a field goal by Carl Bonfield, New Lex guard, just before the whistle sounded.

In the overtime period it was too bad. New Lexington took the tip-off and passed the ball long enough to get a wild shot. The Club defense took the ball from the bank and started down the court where Eve Merriman counted a beautiful shot for the bucket that really won the game. Since the overtime period was for five minutes, the Club went right out and scored two more field goals in rapid succession. Art Steele breaking around Freddie Lowe for one and Merriman taking a pass going into the net for the final counter.

CLUB STALLS

New Lexington tried vainly to score but time was too short and with the Club putting on a good exhibition of stalling the gonfalon was put in the right place.

What makes the victory a sweeter morsel, this is the first encounter the New Lexington team has lost this season on its home court, having lost on New Year's night to Junction City's team led by Big Bob Taylor at Junction City. They trimmed the Jug City lads at New Lex, however. Last year the New Lexington team defeated the Club after running up a 29-7 score in the first half.

The game started fast with Dorthy Courtright counting the first Club pointer from the free throw line and Eve Merriman following with another charity toss.

BISHOP VETERAN

GUIDO FACCHINI

DELAWARE, O., Jan. 8.—Guido Facchini, Alliance, O., Wesleyan's most experienced basketball player, is continuing to play on the Bishop team despite an injury to his hand which it was thought would keep him out of the game for several weeks.

Facchini suffered a badly dislocated thumb while on the Bishop's holiday barnstorming trip but has found an especially constructed leather brace which enables him to continue in his position at guard. The complicated brace seems to affect his clever handling of the ball very little.

He is one of five Ohio Wesleyan veterans who are battling with as many sophomores for positions as regulars on the Bishops team which Coach Ray Detrick is rebuilding this season following the graduation of last year's stars. Detrick has been trying every possible combination of these players and apparently has not decided yet which is the best. Harold Duncan, Cleveland; Lavern Bolton and Richard Milby, Detroit, and Wilmer Dickerson, Adena, are sophomores who have been showing up to decided advantage.

JANUARY IS BUSY FOR O. S. SQUADS

COLUMBUS, O.—The winter sports program is under way at Ohio State University. The month of January finds seven varsity teams in the field.

Varsity and reserve basketball, swimming, wrestling, rifle shooting, gymnastic and fencing are action during the month. Two "B" floor games, seven varsity swimming matches, seven telegraphic rifle matches and one engagement for the wrestling, fencing and gymnastic teams are scheduled.

Outstanding January features included the basketball game with Notre Dame on Jan. 6 at South Bend, the Big Ten curtain-raiser here Jan. 10 against Wisconsin and the initial appearance of swimming as a varsity sport on the Buckeye calendar.

The first Ohio State tank squad will take on Ohio Wesleyan here Jan. 16. It will make its bow in Big Ten competition Jan. 31 against Chicago at Chicago.

CHILlicothe IS NEXT C. A. C. FOE

Strength of Invaders Is Not Known; Two Other Games On List.

A good crowd is expected at C. A. C. gym this evening when the Club tosses, the Flying Clouds and the Emery Club will tangle in three encounters.

The Club will play the Chillicothe A. C. team, the players who will appear here being unknown at this time; the Clouds will meet the Williamsport Merchants in the game preceding the Club and the Emery Club will face the Williamsport All-Stars in the first preliminary beginning at 7 p. m. Two-bits is being charged for all three games, a real bargain bill.

After their astounding victory over the New Lexington team Wednesday evening the C. A. C. tossers are favored to win over the Chillicothe outfit no matter who makes up the roster of the invaders. The team clicked better Wednesday than at any time this year.

GOLF STARS IN RICH TOURNEY

Best In Country Contend For $10,000 In Los Angeles Open Meet.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Fighting for a place in the tournament competition which starts Friday, the greatest field in local links history will tee off over six different courses today in the preliminary qualifying trials of the sixth annual $10,000 Los Angeles open championship.

Thirty-six holes of medal play formed the program.

And approximately 340 devotees, hailing from all sections of the country will set out in the battle with "old man par."

Among the notables forced to undergo the qualifying tests were Eddie Loos, Chicago professional; Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur star; Fay Coleman, southern California amateur champion; Roland MacKenzie, Washington, D. C., amateur and member of the Ryder cup team and Fred Morrison.

The 40 players on the exempt list which includes such stars as Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Leo Diegel and practically all of the other leading professionals of America were getting the jump on their rivals with practice play.

MacDonald Smith, who won the $10,000 open in 1928 and again in 1929, put in his second round at the scene of action and played very well, being close to par.

BISHOPS WHIP DAYTON QUINT

DELAWARE, O., Jan. 8.—Taking advantage of valuable reserve material, Ohio Wesleyan swept the University of Dayton Flyers off their feet and copped a one-sided non-conference basketball game here last night. The score was 35 to 16.

The Bishops took the lead on the opening jump and held it throughout. Dayton never being able to threaten. The score at half-time was 18 to 8. Two full teams saw service for the local quintet.

Myerly, the Bishop's new center, took individual scoring honors with five field goals.

BELIEVE STRIBLING WILL GO TO CHICAGO TO FIGHT CHAMP

BY HYPE IGGOE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—"Paw" Stribling, boss and pay of Billy Stribling, the Georgia Peach, will be in this man's town today, and he ought to go a long way toward clearing up this heavyweight muddle.

The cuttlefishes have been at play, and things look black so far as a real championship battle for this city is concerned.

The great milk fund charity is the real sufferer.

If pa walks in and says "W. L."—the same being his big boy Bill—will fight Jack Sharkey, things might pick up. Schmeling would then have to fight the winner, as a matter of course.

WOULD MEET MAN

It is my bet, and I've got a lot who'll string with me, that "Paw" won't sign to meet Sharkey, but will scrawl his name along the dotted line for that Chicago bout with Max Schmeling next June.

Old man Stribling will rule Bill and himself "off" the minute he does anything like that so far as New York is concerned.

SCHOOL TEAMS TANGLE FRIDAY

Bexley and Lancaster Invade the Local Court For Two Contests.

Circleville high school court teams will resume operations Friday evening when Bexley boys and Lancaster girls invade the local ballwick. The Bexley team will meet the Red and Black in a Central Buckeye league tilt, and the Lancaster team will try to make up for a defeat suffered on its own court several weeks ago.

Both Circleville boys and girls have been practicing diligently, the boys working out at the C. A. C. even during vacation, and neither will have an alibi to offer if the tide of victory turns the wrong check.

Bexley has not been going so good but it can always be expected that the Blue Lions will have a tough enough team.

WRESTLERS MEET

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 8.—One of the best matches of the local wrestling season will be staged here tonight when Pinkie Gardner, New York's sensational matman, steps into the ring to tackle Nick Bozins, Jersey City greek, in a return match.

The big greek slammed Gardner to the mat in their first bout which was held several weeks ago in Schenectady. Tonight's affair will be two-best falls out of three in a finish battle.

Three half-hour scraps are in the preliminary menu. Regis Siki, giant Abyssinian, meets Glenn Wade; Charles Grip will meet Young Honpe, of Dayton, and Bob Wilkie will battle Charlie Santon.

The Magic Industry

MOTOR-minded Americans—what American isn't motor-minded?—begin the automotive year with the New York automobile show, which raises the curtain on hundreds of new models and reveals the new year's trend in design, engines, prices and equipment. It is the motor car's coming-out party.

Because every American is a car rider and one out of every four is a car owner, and because the automotive industry is one of the main cogs of the industrial machine, the public is now showing the profoundest interest in the gains or losses reported by the industry for 1930 and the prospects for 1931.

This public interest is justified by a motor vehicle registration of 26,716,000 for the United States and of 35,516,000 for the world, by the fact that 4,700,000 persons are employed in motor vehicle and allied lines in the United States, that the American people paid $1,010,000,000 in automobile taxes and $315,000,000 in gasoline taxes last year, that $2,200,000,000 was spent for roads and streets last year, and that the automobile industry is the mother of 51,514 car and truck dealers, 50,000 public garages, 100,800 service stations and repair shops, 80,000 supply stores and 360,000 filling stations. From these figures it is apparent that the prosperity of the nation depends largely upon the prosperity of the automobile industry, and vice versa.

Although its production of 3,500,000 cars and trucks last year was 2,120,000 below the record output of 1929, this industry alone consumed 82 per cent of the rubber, 55 per cent of the plate glass, 15 per cent of the iron and steel, 57 per cent of the upholstery leather, 30 per cent of the aluminum, 14 per cent of the copper, 15 per cent of the hardwood and 24 per cent of the lead consumed in the United States.

The motor car makes jobs for millions of men and women and keeps thousands of factories and mines operating.

Self-Expression

THE unfortunate parent is always a safe target, and no doubt the younger generation heartily seconds the current warnings to the heads of families to give the youngsters full rope, to bear contradiction meekly, to avoid showing off superior wisdom, and, in general to encourage the juniors to develop their own views, lines of action and personalities.

But the parent has been told this so often since Mr. Shaw delivered, 20 years ago, his sweeping tirade on the failure of family life that his Victorian predominance has by now been effectually undermined. His morale is not what it was. Already he puts up meekly with what his own father would have termed preposterous license in the blessed name of self-determination. How much farther is he to go? Apparently he may not even fall out with his wife, for the childless authorities on proper child upbringing assure the parent that "superficial harmony" between parents is essential for "superficial discord" results in children who quarrel at their games.

Is the wretched parents to have no self-expression at all? Is he seriously expected to believe that the more assiduously he vegetates in a corner of the drawing room, responding diffidently only when spoken to and smothering all marital difference of opinion under a cloak of superficial harmony, the better will be the effect on the family? It may be so, but, in the face of the steady stream of chastisement that nowadays plays upon him, he will be apt to think that it is high time he took a stand before his spirit is completely broken.

And what is the use of developing personalities, views and opinions in the young if they are not to be permitted to express them when they, in turn, become parents?

Racial Distrust

THE fact that all foreigners were looked upon as barbarians by the ancient Greeks is not so hard to understand when one remembers the difficulty, slowness and infrequency that prevailed in international intercourse until quite modern times, and the unsavory qualities that a man is

THE NEW COLORS

GIRL UNAFRAID BY GLADYS JOHNSON

Spy's Insinuations Cause Separation Ken and Cecile

CHAPTER XL

It was as though her thought summoned him... A rattle at the front door and there was a florist boy with a large square box. Even before she lifted the cover, Ardeth knew it came from Ken.

Large double white violets. A fragrant mass, crisp and sweet and somehow smelling of the brown wet earth.

No word with them. She needed no word with them.

When Tom came to drive her out to Mary's she was waiting for him with her wraps on, and there was a bunch of white violets pinned to her coat collar. Tom's watchful eyes said that she had been crying. It was a quiet drive out to Mary's.

Impossible to be sad at Mary's house, a cheerful glow of candlelight and holly. With Fred, tall and grinning behind his new pipe. With the Chickadees ecstatically embracing everyone's knees and incoherently with delight.

"If the child hasn't become an idiot through sheer excitement I'll be thankful!" Mary explained as she carried Ardeth away to the bedroom to lay off her wraps.

"She was too little to get the idea of Christmas last year, but I think it will take her until Easter to recover."

So Mary chattered and all the time her eyes were regarding Ardeth with a queer uncertain look as the girl stood before the mirror.

Ardeth was altogether lovely, today in a maroon crepe, which flung her tender throat and face into warm relief and made flame of her tawny hair. A long string of carved ivory beads and the white violets added the necessary contrast.

Gossip's Aftermath

Mary spoke the words having an odd reluctance, as though they were dragged from her against her will.

"Ardeth... did you know that Ken and Cecile have separated?"

Eyes suddenly large and dark in a white face Ardeth turned to face her. "Why—why—no. Are you sure?"

"Cecile's mother told Mrs. Hawkins. They're thicker than thieves, you know. Ever since that spy thing came out Cecile's been a demon."

Ardeth's hand had crept to her throat, frantically twisting ivory beads.

"It was just a couple of days ago," Mary went on. Then, bitingly, "Much good it will do. Not for Ken nor you—oh, my dear child, don't look so!"

With a soft rush she rose, took the girl in her arms. "I told you, Ardeth, so you wouldn't hear it from someone else and be startled. But it means nothing, darling. She won't give you up locally. She's too selfish, too spiteful. She's him in a cul-de-sac, Ardeth."

Mary felt the slender body trembling. Ardeth's voice came hoarsely.

"Where—where is Ken now?"

"I don't know. At a hotel I suppose. From what Mr. Parker told Phil's mother, the break is final." Mary lifted her head sharply as new voices filtered into the bedroom. "The Ames have come! I must go. Pull yourself together, Ardeth child and come out and join us."

When she was gone, Ardeth moved to the window.

Ken had left Cecile... What did that mean? Mary was right—Cecile would never give Ken his legal freedom. Things were unchanged for herself.

Rain driving into a gray world. Where was Ken on this rainy Christmas? He would not be with friends—she knew his sensitive nature too well for that. Alone and untimely on Christmas...

A hotel room, dinner alone... The girl had drooped against the window frame, unshed tears rising in her throat. Gray rain lashing outside, and in her heart a little hopeless prayer.

Carolyn Forsythe was giving a New Year's Eve party.

When Tom mentioned it—taking it for granted that she was going with him, Ardeth had hesitated. Unfair, to give Tom all her spare time... ran her thoughts. Unkind to lead him on in this manner.

No Proposal

Tom's lips had a very little twitch. "Don't be afraid, Ardeth, this isn't leading up to another proposal. I guess the silent partnership of the shop is the best I can hope for."

He patted the kind little hand which had gone to his arm, a pat supposed to be reassuring and very brotherly. "You good little kid—then you're coming. I'll tell Carolyn."

The Forsythe home, standing in the midst of its dark gardens was in a festive glow that night. It had lost its usual air of bright primness for the time being under the red and green of holiday decorations, just as Carolyn had lost her bright primness and become a rosy and slightly anxious hostess.

Looking at her rosy face and plump body, Ardeth thought of Dickens' creation, pretty Dot Peckynble.

The French doors were flung open between the large rooms. A five-piece dance orchestra played at one end of the long space. Serpentine and confetti made an unusual splash of color against the dignified background.

Ardeth was slender and lovely in cream lace and she spoke with a vivid gaiety which gave no hint of her own serious thoughts. New Year's Eve... the brink of another year... What could it hold for her? She wondered somberly. Was it empty and grudging like the one which was shipping away tonight? What did it hold for Ken?

The hours became minutes to laugh and dance away. Her face was a mask to hide her feelings. She slipped into the bedroom—tentatively to powder her face—really to relax from her forced vivacity. A relief to be alone in the shaded light. She went to the open window and drew deep breaths of the fresh, sweet air blowing in from the garden.

The voices of two men startled her as they paused in the hall for a smoke. They were discussing the stock market. At first she listened apathetically, barely noting the meaning of the words.

Caught Short.

"A lot of fellows we know got caught in that jam when Consolidated Rubber dropped. Glad it caught me with only a few shares—and those I'd bought outright. I hear that Lane dropped quite a sum on that stock. And Gleason, too. Caught him bad. He lost all he put in—and a lot more."

"If the damn Tools will buy on margin, what do they expect? I won't touch a thing that isn't bought outright. But Gleason's been plunging for quite a while now."

"Yes, and between ourselves Ken can't afford to lose, went on the first voice, a little late today. He looks like the devil. I think he's on the skids if you ask me. Darned nice fellow, too..."

The two men moved on, the smoke of their cigars lingering in the hall after them.

Like a couple of voices off stage, she thought the girl who listened in the bedroom. A couple of voices which started the plot rolling.

Out of the mirror the consciousness of her own white face grew upon her. In the depths of the shadowy eyes a sudden resolve growing.

She was running through the dark garden, clutching her coat collar about her throat, high heels turning uncertainly under her.

Late blooming roses and damp earth... black, star-encrusted sky. She was stealing down red brick stairs leading to a back street and there was an empty taxi cruising toward her. She hailed it, giving the number of the building where Ken had his office.

Dark blocks reeled off beneath the taxi wheels while the girl sat tense on the edge of the seat, her eyes staring with strange fixity.

The taxi slowed. Almost stopped. Crept through traffic. A city gone mad with excitement. A sea of faces flushing by the windows. Men's faces. Women's faces. Distorted with laughter. A steadily increasing roar surging like the wash of the sea. Confetti dashed at the windows. Screams thrust against the glass. Screamed greetings.

Teach Child Good Food Habits

Growing Children Should Learn to Relish Wholesome, Health-Building Foods, Says Authority

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IN CONSIDERING the food requirements of children, we must always keep in mind the fact that they are still growing. Children are exceedingly active and every day increases the size of their muscles and bones. This increase can proceed only if proper and plentiful supplies of food are at their disposal.

As in the adult, the factors of wear and tear of the body must be considered. In the child an additional factor must be provided, for, namely growth. If the food supply of the child is scanty, growth is retarded.

Milk should form the basis of the child's diet. The child should not be allowed to become indifferent to milk and never actually develop a dislike for this important food.

With our exception, the authorities state that each child requires a quart of milk daily. We can easily change the old saying to read "a quart of milk a day will keep the doctor away."

In general the child's food should consist of milk, eggs, cereals, vegetables and fruits. All should be served occasionally but not daily and always in small amounts.

Foods should be either boiled, roasted or baked. I would advise against any fried foods for children. In preparing cereals they should be thoroughly cooked, preferably the night before and warmed for breakfast.

Rich and highly flavored foods are not advised. Children do not as a rule crave rich foods. They acquire the taste for sweets. The child who is not familiar with sweets will never crave them, and will be content with wholesome, bland foods.

Condiments and spices are not to be included in the child's diet. These articles are intended to stimulate appetite and have no place in the child's food.

If children eat at the same table as the adults, care must be taken in the table conversation. If mother or father exposes a dislike for one particular food, you may be assured that Tommy or Betty will soon indicate a dislike for the same food. Conversation at the table should at all times be pleasant and cheerful.

Never try to tempt children with articles. Neither is it wise to bribe them to eat. It is best to depend upon healthy exercise and plenty of fresh air to create the appetite. All other methods are artificial.

POPE PIUS' MARRIAGE ENCYCLICAL PUBLIC

By Guglielmo Emanuel
ROME, Jan. 8.—A stern warning to the christian world to take heed of its mad pace and turn back into the paths of divine law was pronounced today by Pope Pius XI in his eagerly awaited encyclical on marriage.

The document, explaining with evident regret that since even among the faithful pernicious mistakes were being made and de-

There May be Poison in YOUR Bowels!

STEP out tomorrow morning with the fresh buoyancy and briskness that comes from a clean intestinal tract. Syrup Pepsin—a doctor's prescription for the bowels—will help you do this. This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other pure ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort.

Poisons absorbed into the system form souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that, gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drugstore sell.

praved and perverted customs acquired," the Vatican deemed it necessary to raise its voice to warn his flocks away from these poisoned pastures.

The encyclical in its entirety marks back to the fundamental marriage law elaborately put forth in the encyclical of Leo XIII, which refutes divorce and emphasizes that only by continence within the married state can families be limited without transgressing the divine law.

Pope Pius XI's encyclical is in three parts. The indissolubility of divine marriage is affirmed in the first part; the second deals with crimes against christian marriages, and the third is devoted largely to a remedy of the defects as viewed by the pontiff.

Reiterating in no uncertain terms that marriage was instituted by God as indissoluble, the document issued by his holiness said:

"Christ having said 'whoever repudiates his wife and takes another commits adultery,' just so those who take a woman repudiated by her husband also commit adultery. Whoever God has united, man cannot separate. Once wedded, one remains wedded for life."

The conception that marriage can be dissolved through legal methods or otherwise was sharply opposed and denounced by the Pope who deplored the fact that people seem willing not only to tolerate divorce but also to ratify it by law.

"Divorce is fatal for nature," he declared in his encyclical, "it opens new avenues of corruption in parliamentary and public life."

The effect of the stage, motion picture, modern literature and radio broadcasts on the divine institution of marriage caused the pontiff "serious concern," he said that these public means of entertainment regularly offended marital principles even to the extent of praising divorce and excusing vice.

Continuing into the second part of the encyclical, the Pope bitterly attacked modern marital theories, caustically observing that "some people have even gone so far as to invent new forms of a temporary union called 'companionate marriage,' which is nothing less than 'free love.'"

Elaborating on the subject, the pontiff declared he fully understands the fear of those whose sufferings would be too great to permit children, but advise chastity in place of contraception. Marriage, he pointed out here, has far higher aims than the mere satisfying of physical passions.

Pope Pius XI took a determined stand against the medical necessity of saving a mother's life at the risk of the child's life, but instead advised honest surgeons to strive their utmost to save both. Legislatures were admonished not to forget their duty in defending innocent lives; he maintained the excesses of eugenics also called for sound criticism.

The pontiff, referring to women's emancipation, pointed out that physiological emancipation means nothing less than avoidance of woman's highest duty to mankind, namely motherhood. In the same breath he viewed women's social and economic emancipation as largely an excuse for abandoning of family duties in pursuit of business and other occupations.

"Many endanger their home and internal salvation when without serious grounds they enter into marriage, which the church wisely thinks is often the result of children straying away from their religious teachings."

UNEMPLOYMENT NOT AT WOREST

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—There are between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 unemployed persons in the United States with little hope of providing work for the majority of them before spring, Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the president's emergency employment commission, declared today at the senate's inquiry into national unemployment.

He declared he expected the employment situation to be "at its worst" in January and February. "My best estimate is that there are now between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 persons completely unemployed," said Woods. "My feeling is that this situation won't improve until spring."

Woods said an unemployment census would be taken the middle of this month and that he expected the result would show conditions "at their worst," because "employment is likely to be lowest in January and February."

COLLEGE CONCERT IS WELL RECEIVED

The concert of the Wooster College Glee Club given at the First Presbyterian church was well received by the gathering which took advantage of this opportunity to hear good male voices.

Much favorable comment is being heard over the work of Robert Hill, pianist, whose 15th Rhapsody was pronounced one of the finest interpretations of the number ever heard. George Graham, young director of the club won plaudits for his excellent baritone voice. The music of the glee club was very good as a whole.

Carl Toensmeier, son of Rev. and Mrs. E. S. Toensmeier, is a member of the club.

WHITE SUFFERS IRRITATED EYES

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—Governor-elect George White of Marietta today was recovering from a severe case of irritated eyes which he contracted several days ago when he was subjected to the intense rays of a klieg light during the taking of a movie.

STRICT TRAINING REGULATIONS FOR AVIATORS NOW STRESSED

By Robert S. Thornburgh
WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Further tightening of airworthiness requirements for aircraft, strict regulations pertaining to the training and physical qualifications of pilots and greater attention to the rating of aeronautical schools, placed in effect Jan. 1, were expected by commerce department officials to add safety to commercial flying during the present year.

In 1930 24 passengers were killed in accidents on scheduled airways, 22 of the deaths coming in the first six months of the year. Officials today called attention to this vast improvement in the past six months as indicative of the greater safety of flying, and as a basis for their belief that 1931 will witness still greater security in a rapidly growing form of transportation.

At the beginning of the year there were 15,380 pilots licensed to fly, 15,148 active student licenses, many of whom will become full-fledged flyers during the next twelve months, 7,546 licensed aircraft and 38 flying schools holding approved ratings by the aeronautical branch of the commerce department.

There were 99 established domestic air-routes and 20 foreign routes with connections to the United States, domestic routes extending over 29,763 miles, and foreign routes over 19,662 miles. Over these domestic routes aircraft was scheduled to fly 103,542 miles daily and over foreign routes 14,421 miles.

Substantial progress was made during the year in equipping airways with radio beacon equipment and lights to increase the safety of night flying. Contracts amounting to $95,660 have recently been let for installation of various radio equipment and other aids to flying and improvements to landing fields.

Officials said that during the current year several thousand additional miles of airways will be lighted and other aids to navigation installed.

The effective date of the proposed regulations providing that radio equipment on aircraft must be of a type approved by the department has been postponed. The regulations were to have gone in effect December 31, but recent developments indicated it would be advisable to permit further experimentation on the part of manufacturers and operators before setting up special standards. No date for the effective date of the regulations has been set.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

SUPREME COURT DEALS BLOW TO IDEA OF PRESIDENT HOOVER

WASHINGTON — The United States supreme court apparently has dealt a body blow to one of President Hoover's plans to make the national capital: "a model city" of prohibition enforcement.

When Mr. Hoover first advanced the suggestion that Congress enact legislation to tighten up enforcement in Washington, at the outset of his administration, there was a chorus of approval from the div organizations that have their headquarters here.

Senator Howell (R) of Nebraska, promptly introduced a bill making every Washington policeman a prohibition agent, and further providing that raids of private homes could be made upon the "suspicion" of two or more persons that liquor was illegally possessed in the home.

While Mr. Hoover never specifically endorsed the bill, it was generally accepted as an administration measure, and in his recent message to Congress the president recommended that legislation "partially completed" to make Washington a drier city be finished at this session.

The search and seizure provision of the Howell bill, which is far more drastic than any yet proposed in Congress, has been savagely attacked by the opponents of prohibition, and has even been criticised by some dries as going too far. Its critics contend it violates the constitution in this respect.

On Monday, the supreme court handed down a decision in the case of the Go-Bart Importing company which deals with this very phase of search and seizure, and in the opinion of most constitutional lawyers would apply equally to what is proposed in the Howell bill.

The Go-Bart raid was staged by federal agents on a warrant sworn out on suspicion that there was violation of the law. Officials of the company were ultimately convicted of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws they appealed on the ground the raid was illegal, and that their constitutional rights had been abridged.

The court's decision was written by Justice Butler, who is considered one of the conservative members of the bench. He concluded that the action of the government agents in raiding the offices of the Go-Bart concern on mere suspicion, and seizing papers and files, was "a lawless invasion of the premises and a general exploratory search in the hope that evidence of crime might be found."

Citing the fourth amendment to the constitution, Justice Butler further asserted that "it emphasizes the purpose to protect against all general searches, since before the creation of our government such searches have been deemed obnoxious to the fundamental principles of liberty."

RETIRED-FARMER BEAT TO DEATH

SANDUSKY, O.—Carl Avery, 46, owner of a general store at Birmingham Village, 25 miles east of here, was free on his own cognizance today, while Coroner Paul N. Squire conducted an inquest into the death of William Lamb: a 64, retired farmer, who died from injuries received during a fight.

Sheriff John W. Parker said Avery confessed to "beating up" Lambert because he paid too much attention to Mrs. Avery.

No charge was placed against Avery, pending the outcome of the investigation.

The Magic Industry

MOTOR-minded Americans—and what American isn't motor-minded?—begin the automotive year with the New York automobile show, which raises the curtain on hundreds of new models and reveals the new year's trend in design, engines, prices and equipment. It is the motor car's coming-out party.

Because every American is a car rider and one out of every four is a car owner, and because the automotive industry is one of the main cogs of the industrial machine, the public is now showing the profoundest interest in the gains or losses reported by the industry for 1930 and the prospects for 1931.

This public interest is justified by a motor vehicle registration of 26,715,000 for the United States and of 35,518,000 for the world, by the fact that 4,700,000 persons are employed in motor vehicle and allied lines in the United States, that the American people paid $1,010,000,000 in automobile taxes and $515,000,000 in gasoline taxes last year, that $2,200,000,000 was spent for roads and streets last year, and that the automobile industry is the mother of 51,514 car and truck dealers, 50,000 public garages, 100,300 service stations and repair shops, 80,000 supply stores and 350,000 filling stations. From these figures it is apparent that the prosperity of the nation depends largely upon the prosperity of the automobile industry, and vice versa.

Although its production of 3,500,000 cars and trucks last year was 2,120,000 below the record output of 1929, this industry alone consumed 82 per cent of the rubber, 55 per cent of the plate glass, 15 per cent of the iron and steel, 57 per cent of the upholstery leather, 30 per cent of the aluminum, 14 per cent of the copper, 15 per cent of the hardwood and 24 per cent of the lead consumed in the United States.

The motor car makes jobs for millions of men and women and keeps thousands of factories and mines operating.

Self-Expression

THE unfortunate parent is always a safe target, and no doubt the younger generation heartily seconds the current warnings to the heads of families to give the youngsters full rope, to bear contradiction meekly, to avoid showing off superior wisdom, and in general to encourage the juniors to develop their own views, lines of action and personalities.

But the parent has been told this so often since Mr. Shaw delivered, 20 years ago, his sweeping tirade on the failure of family life that his Victorian predominance has by now been effectually undermined. His morale is not what it was. Already he puts up meekly with what his own father would have termed preposterous license in the blessed name of self-determination. How much farther is he to go? Apparently he may not even fall out with his wife, for the childless authorities on proper child upbringing assure the parent that "superficial harmony" between parents is essential, for "superficial discord" results in children who quarrel at their games.

Is the wretched parent to have no self-expression at all? Is he seriously expected to believe that the more assiduously he vegetates in a corner of the drawing room, responding diffidently only when spoken to and smothering all marital difference of opinion under a cloak of superficial harmony, the better will be the effect on the family? It may be so, but, in the face of the steady stream of chastisement that nowadays plays upon him, he will be apt to think that it is high time he took a stand before his spirit is completely broken.

And what is the use of developing personalities, views and opinions in the young if they are not to be permitted to express them when they, in turn, become parents?

Racial Distrust

THE fact that all foreigners were looked upon as barbarians by the ancient Greeks is not so hard to understand when one remembers the difficulty, slowness and infrequency that prevailed in international intercourse until quite modern times, and the unenviable qualities that a man is

THE NEW COLORS

GIRL UNAFRAID BY GLADYS JOHNSON

Spy's Insinuations Cause Separation Ken and Cecile

CHAPTER XL

It was as though her thought summoned him . . . A rattle at the front door and there was a florist boy with a large square box. Even before she lifted the cover, Ardeth knew it came from Ken.

Large double white violets. A fragrant mass, crisp and sweet and somehow smelling of the brown wet earth.

No word with them. She needed no word.

When Tom came to drive her out to Mary's she was waiting for him with her wraps on, and there was a bunch of white violets pinned to her coat collar. Tom's watchful eyes saw that she had been crying. It was a quiet drive out to Mary's.

Impossible to be sad at Mary's house, a cheerful glow of candle-light and holly. With Fred, tall and grinning behind his new pipe. With the Chickadee ecstatically embracing everyone's knees and incoherent with delight.

"If the child hasn't become an idiot through sheer excitement I'll be thankful!" Mary explained as she carried Ardeth away to the bedroom to lay off her wraps. "She was too little to get the idea of Christmas last year, but I think it will take her until Easter to recover."

So Mary chattered and all the time her eyes were regarding Ardeth with a queer uncertain look as the girl stood before the mirror.

Ardeth was altogether lovely today in a maroon crepe, which flung her tender throat and face into warm relief and made flame of her tawny hair. A long string of carved ivory beads and the white violets added the necessary contrast.

Gossip's Aftermath

Mary spoke the words having an odd reluctance, as though they were dragged from her against her will.

"Ardeth . . . did you know that Ken and Cecile have separated?"

Eyes suddenly large and dark in a white face Ardeth turned to face her. "Why—why—no. Are you sure?"

"Cecile's mother told Mrs. Hawkins. They're thicker than thieves, you know. Ever since that spy thing came out Cecile's been a demon."

Ardeth's hand had crept to her throat, frantically twisting ivory beads.

"It was just a couple of days ago," Mary went on. Then, bitterly, "Much good it will do! Not for Ken nor you—oh, my dear child, don't look so!"

With a soft rustle she rose, took the girl in her arms. "I told you, Ardeth, so you wouldn't hear it from someone else and be startled. But it means nothing, darling. She won't give him up legally. She's too selfish, too spiteful. She has him in a cul-de-sac, Ardeth."

Mary felt the slender body trembling. Ardeth's voice came hoarsely. "Where—where is Ken now?"

"I don't know. At a hotel I suppose. From what Mrs. Parker told Phil's mother, the break is final." Mary lifted her head sharply as new voices filtered into the bedroom. "The Ames have come! I must go. Pull yourself together, Ardeth, child and come out and join us."

When she was gone, Ardeth moved to the window.

Ken had left Cecile . . . What did that mean? Mary was right—Cecile would never give Ken his legal freedom. Things were unchanged for herself . . .

Rain driving into a gray world. Where was Ken on this rainy Christmas? He would not be with friends—she knew his sensitive nature too well for that. Alone and unhappy on Christmas . . . A hotel room . . . dinner alone . . . The girl had dropped against the window frame, unshed tears rising in her throat. Gray rain lashed outside, and in her heart a little hopeless prayer.

Carolyn Forsythe was giving a New Year's Eve party. When Tom mentioned it—taking it for granted that she was going with him, Ardeth had hesitated. Unfair, to give Tom all her spare time. A rain her thoughts. Unkind to lead him on in this manner . . .

No Proposal

Tom's lips had a wry little twist. "Don't be afraid, Ardeth, this isn't leading up to another proposal. I guess the silent partnership of the shop is the best I can hope for."

He patted the kind little hand which had gone to his arm, a pat supposed to be reassuring and very brotherly. "You good little kid—then you're coming. I'll tell Carolyn."

The Forsythe home, standing in the midst of its dark gardens was in a festive glow that night. It had lost its usual air of bright primness for the time being under the red and green of holiday decorations, just as Carolyn had lost her bright primness and became a rosy and slightly anxious hostess.

Looking at her rosy face and plump body, Ardeth thought of Dickens' creation, pretty Dot Peerybingle.

The French doors were flung open between the large rooms. A five-piece dance orchestra played at one end of the long space. Serpentine and confetti made an unusual splash of color against the dignified background.

Ardeth was slender and lovely in cream lace and she spoke with a vivid gaiety which gave no hint of her own serious thoughts. New Year's Eve . . . the brink of another year . . . What could it hold for her? She wondered somberly. Was it empty and grudging like the one which was slipping away tonight? What did it hold for Ken?

The hours became milestones to laugh and dance away. Her face was a mask to hide her feelings. She slipped into the bedroom, ostensibly to powder her face—really to relax from her forced vivacity. A relief to be alone in the shaded light. She went to the open window and drew deep breaths of the fresh, sweet air blowing in from the garden.

The voices of two men startled her as they paused in the hall for a smoke. They were discussing the stock market. At first she listened apathetically, barely noting the meaning of the words.

Caught Short

"A lot of fellows we know got caught in that jam when Consolidated Rubber dropped. Glad it caught me with only a few shares—and those I'd bought outright. I hear that Lane dropped quite a sum on the stock. And Gleason, too. Caught him bad. He lost all he put in—and a lot more."

"If the damn fools will buy on margin, what do they expect?" came the second impatient voice. "I won't touch a thing that isn't bought outright. But Gleason's been plunging for quite a while now."

"Yes, and between ourselves Ken can't afford to lose," went on the first voice. "I saw him late today. He looks like the devil. I think he's on the skids if you ask me. Darned nice fellow, too . . ."

The two men moved on, the smoke of their cigars lingering in the hall after them.

Like a "couple of voices off stage," thought the girl who listened in the bedroom. A couple of voices which started the plot rolling.

Out of the mirror the consciousness of her own white face grew upon her. In the depths of the shadowy eyes a sudden resolve growing.

She was running through the dark garden, clutching her coat collar about her throat, high heels turning uncertainly under her.

Late blooming roses and damp earth . . . black, star-encrusted sky. She was stealing down red brick stairs leading to a back street and there was an empty taxi cruising toward her. She hailed it, giving the number of the building where Ken had his office.

Dark blocks reeled off beneath the taxi wheels while the girl sat tense on the edge of the seat, her eyes staring with strange fixity.

The taxi slowed. Almost stopped. Crept through traffic. A city gone mad with merriment. A sea of faces flashing by the windows. Men's faces. Women's faces. Distorted with laughter. A steadily increasing roar surging like the wash of the sea. Confetti dashed at the window. Horns thrust against the glass. Screamed greetings.

Teach Child Good Food Habits

Growing Children Should Learn to Relish Wholesome, Health-Building Foods, Says Authority

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IN CONSIDERING the food requirements of children, we must always keep in mind the fact that they are still growing. Children are exceedingly active and every day increases the size of their muscles and bones. This increase can proceed only if proper and plentiful supplies of food are at their disposal.

As in the adult, the factors of wear and tear of the body must be considered. In the child an additional factor must be provided for, namely growth. If the food supply of the child is scanty, growth is retarded.

Milk should form the basis of the child's diet. The child should not be allowed to become indifferent to milk and never actually develop a dislike for the important food. Almost without exception, the authorities state that each child requires a quart of milk daily. We can easily change this old saying to read "a quart of milk a day will keep the doctor away."

In general the child's food should consist of milk, eggs, cereals, vegetables and fruits. Meat should be served occasionally, but not daily and always in small amounts.

Foods should be either boiled, roasted or baked. I would advise against any fried foods for children. In preparing cereals they should be thoroughly cooked, preferably the night before and warmed for breakfast.

Rich and highly flavored foods are not advised. Children do not as a rule crave rich foods. They acquire the taste for sweets. The child who is not familiar with sweets will never crave them, and will be content with wholesome, bland foods. Condiments and spices are not to be included in the child's diet. These articles are intended to stimulate appetite and have no place in the child's food.

If children eat at the same table as the adults, care must be taken in the table conversation. If mother or father exposes a dislike for one particular food you may be assured that Tommy or Betty will soon imitate a dislike for the same food. Conversation at the table should at all times be pleasant and cheerful.

Never try to tempt children with delicacies. Neither is it wise to bribe them to eat. It is best to depend upon healthy exercise and plenty of fresh air to create the appetite. All other methods are artificial.

OBITUARY

Most beautiful and impressive were the services at the United Brethren Church, Tuesday afternoon for the late Mrs. Mary Denman, conducted by the pastor, Rev.
W. F. Rutherford. A large gathering of relatives and friends, and many floral offerings gave a loving tribute to a life that had been such a help and inspiration to so many.

Rev. Rutherford most fittingly spoke of her long life, fifty-six years, spent in her Master's service, right there in that Church, thirty of them as church organist.
He spoke of her as a loving wife and mother, and the many many friends she had won in her quiet, sweet very interested in every detail of their lives.

He closed with that tender little poem of Kipling's "When Earth's

A trio composed of Mrs. Ellen Hegele, Mrs. Fannie Greeno and Mrs. Bessie Long sang three old favorite hymns—"In The Cleft,"
"Jesus Lover of My Soul," and
"Asleep in Jesus."

Among those attending from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. C.
H. Lucas of Piqua, Mrs. W. B.
Toole of Jamaica, N. Y., Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Kuhen and children of Wellston, Mrs. J. W. Richardson of Dayton, Mrs. Jay Cain of Lima,
Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Denman, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Denman, Mr. and

Mrs. Andrew Denman, Lee Deu-man, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Johnson and Mrs. Grace Ward all of Columbus.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our appreciation to the many friends and neighbors who extended words of sympathy and acts of kindness in our sore bereavement. Also do we thank those who sent beautiful floral offerings.

SUPREME COURT DEALS BLOW TO IDEA OF PRESIDENT HOOVER

WASHINGTON — The United States supreme court apparently has dealt a body blow to one of President Hoover's plans to make the national capital: "a model city" of prohibition enforcement.

When Mr. Hoover first advanced the suggestion that Congress enact legislation to tighten up enforcement in Washington, at the outset of his administration, there was a chorus of approval from the div organizations that have their headquarters here.

Senator Howell (R) of Nebraska, promptly introduced a bill making every Washington policeman a prohibition agent, and further providing that raids of private homes could be made upon the "suspicion" of two or more persons that liquor was illegally possessed in the home.

While Mr. Hoover never specifically endorsed the bill, it was generally accepted as an administration measure, and in his recent message to congress the president recommended that legislation "partially completed" to make Washington a dryer city be finished at this session.

The search and seizure provision of the Howell bill, which is far more drastic than any yet proposed in Congress, has been savagely attacked by the opponents of prohibition, and has even been criticised by some drys as going too far. Its critics contend it violates the constitution in this respect.

On Monday, the supreme court handed down a decision in the case of the Go-Bart Importing company which deals with this very phrase of search and seizure, and in the opinion of most constitutional lawyers would apply equally to what is proposed in the Howell bill.

The Go-Bart raid was staged by federal agents on a warrant sworn out on suspicion that there was violation of the law. Officials of the company were ultimately convicted of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws they appealed on the ground the raid was illegal, and that their constitutional rights had been abridged.

The court's decision was written by Justice Butler, who is considered one of the conservative members of the bench. He concluded that the action of the government agents in raiding the offices of the Go-Bart concern on mere suspicion, and seizing papers and files, was "a lawless invasion of the premises and a general exploratory search in the hope that evidence of crime might be found."

Citing the fourth amendment to the constitution, Justice Butler further asserted that "it emphasizes the purpose to protect against all general searches, since before the creation of our government such searches have been deemed obnoxious to the fundamental principles of liberty."

RETIRED FARMER BEAT TO DEATH

SANDUSKY, O.—Carl Avery, 46, owner of a general store at Birmingham Village, 25 miles east of here, was free on his own cognizance today, while Coroner Paul N. Squire conducted an inquest into the death of William Lamberts, 64, retired farmer, who died from injuries received during a fight.

Sheriff John W. Parker said Avery confessed to "beating up Lambert because he paid too much attention to Mrs. Avery."

No charge was placed against Avery, pending the outcome of the investigation.
